The main building contained eight sheet mills, three double puddling furnaces, three big engine, bar mill, muck mill and several annealing furnaces. There was some partly finished iron also in the mill, and four flat cars loaded with finished iron stood on the track next the hill ready for shipment. These the hill, ready for shipment. the firemen were located on the creek bank north of the burned mill. They consisted of the frame office building, the warehouse, the galvanizing works, the big battery of boilers and the boiler house, the machine shop and roll lathes, a smaller battery of boilers, the blacksmith shop ann stables. Part of the track leading to the coal mines was destroyed and partsaved. Part of the annealing furnaces were untouched by

THE INSURANCE.

Ever since Mr. Whitaker has controlled the mill his insurance has been placed by Major J. C. Alderson. It was placed this year by the Alderson agency, though a part of it was in com-panies represented here by Alfred Paull & Co., D. E. Stalnaker and other agencies. The total insurance was $79, It was divided among the follow-

The remaining insurance was on the buildings, equipment and stock which were not damaged, so that the loss to the insurance companies will probably not be over 60 per cent of the policies. THE WORST PEATURE.

Though no official declaration of the company's intention can yet be obtained, it can scarcely be doubted that the works will be rebuilt at once. This will require several months, however. A man said yesterday it would cost 55,000 to clean up the debris ready to commence rebuilding. In the meantime over 300 men, counting laborers, miners and others incidentally emminers and others incidentally employed, are thrown out of work at a time when the community is least pre-pared for such a blow. Saturday the mill's pay roll aggregated $10,000. Six of the eight sheet mills were in opera-tion and it was the intention to put the other-two on this week. The mill was running three turns, each train of rolls thus giving employment to twenty-one men and three boys, the latter receiving

Crescent Lodge No. 8, Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers, has been called to meet at its hall in the McLain block to-morrow atternoon, at which a full attendance is desired, It is the purpose of the meeting to volunteer the services of one hundred men for a week to assist the Whitaker Iron Company in clearing up the wreckage left by the disastrous fire. The lodge is made up of workmen in the Whitaker mill, and their action at this time is worthy of commendation and respect. Such actions show that capital and labor are, at least in Wheel-ing, on more friendly terms than they are represented to be by many people.

THE BURNED MILL.

The mill which was destroyed yesterday morning was one of Wheeling's oldest and most important industries. It ran more steadily than most similar plants, and under Mr. Whitaker's man-agement was noted for liberal treatment of labor and amicable relations with its men. It was started in 1852 by Messrs. Gill. Hardman and Stevens, with two small trains of rolls. Many of the lead-ing iron workers of this section served their apprenticeship there.
In 1857 the Crescent Iron Company succeeded to the business, and the mill was gradually much enlarged, and rails were added as one of the products. The Meesra, Whitaker became interested in this company, and in time secured a this company, and in time sectred a controlling interest, and some time ago the name was changed to the Whitaker Iron Company. Rails have not been made for six or saven years. For five or six years a specialty has been made of galvanized and corrugated roofing iron, and these branches increased the prosperity of the mill, whose predominating product however is still sheet. prosperity of the mill, whose predominating product, however, is still sheet iron of popular brands. The mill when burned had a capacity of 15,000 tons of finished iron a year.

It has been suggested that the company will doubtless lease and operate one of the idle sheet mills in the vicinity until it can rebuild its own factors, thus beening up, with its orders.

"McFee, of Dublin."

Farce-comedy will hold the boards at the Opera House on Thursday and Fri-day evenings, November 16 and 17, when John T. Kelly, the humorous exponent of Celtic roles, will appear in the merry eccentricity, "McFee, of Dublin," a joint play-effort of Mr. Kelly and Charles T. Vincent. The authors a joint play-effort of Mr. Kelly and Charles T. Vincent. The authors claim a departure for the comedy, as it possesses a plot, a much-felt want with the majority of farcical plays. The comody is in three acts and is said to be built on the funniest lines imaginable. Mr. Kelly's support this season is promised to be stronger then ever before. The clever southertte, Georgie Parker, heads the female portion of the cast in the role of Molly.
